Honekong, August 14th, 1878.

THE correspondent of the Shanghai Courier who writes from Yokohama is inclined to take a very gloomy view of the state of affairs in Japan. The assassination of the Home Minister Okubo was undoubtedly a political act, and the document addressed by the murderers to His Majesty the Mikado is of a revolutionary character, but we have so far heard nothing to prove that these few fanatics represented any influential faction in the Empire. There is doubtless some discontent still smouldering among the samu- dogs be destroyed in the day-time.—Yours, &c., rai, but they have received a sharp lesson in the suppression of the late insurrection in Kiushiu and will scarcely risk a fresh struggle. Besides, the writer in the Courier obviously does not believe that danger lies on that side; he thinks it arises from the Radica l party, who would fain run before they can well walk alone-who are eager to try the experiment of representative institutions. We are disposed to class this correspondent with the pessimists, who are for over discerning clouds shoe shop for goods supplied. Defendant did on the political horizon and foretelling storms not appear. Judgment for the plaintiff with which never break. There may be fresh difficulties before the Japanese Governmont, and they may-and we trust will-be ultimately compelled to concede a constitution to the country, but we see no reason for ploy of Mr. Armstrong and was in charge of the a fresh civil war, and believe it can be avoided. As for the MIRADO, we have always heard that the veneration, respect, and love entertained for him and his exalted position is deeply rooted in the breasts of the people. Japan has, it is sincerely to be hoped, passed through her baptism of political fire, and will henceforth go on peacefully and steadily fendant. About a quarter to one he called towards the development of a sound and stable administration based on constitutional prin- fendant then returned and witness told him ciples. But this cannot be accomplished a day, and it is folly to expect the Japanese Government to grant such concessions all at once and before the people are qualified exercise electoral rights and duties.

it to be set as stiff as a board By this means, also, they are self-reefing from the foot, for as the halliards are lowered, the bamboos drop on one another and in no way disturb the effectiveness of the sail. Another advantage is that it enables the vessels to lay closer to the wind than any other description of rig likewise they are more easy to handle, require fewer men, and are able to tack, without losing their way through the water. The celebrated vac't America was we believe, the first vessel that introduced the principle which has since prevailed of "taut" spreading sails in yachts, instead of the old "bellying" sails in vogue before, and the "double topsails" in vessels is only an outcome of this principle. The Ininese bamboo rig is a favourite rig with boats and yachts all over the East, and we call to mind one in Kobe which has been specially successful. In addition, the alterations are not only feasible but inexpensive, the cheap matting used for sails being peculiar to both countries; and further, adoption of the Chinese system will not be liable to excite the ignorant prejudices of the seafaring classes, as it much resembles the old rig provailing in Japan at the time of the Sho edict; and the change may be popularized among the Kilia branch of the Danube commands

Not only does it appear that the native craft so altered will facilitate the development of the coast trade, increase and expand the knowledge of the seamen, but the vessels will be canable of becoming valuable auxiliaries for the secure protection of the coast in times of danger or emergency. Therefore, from whatever point this question is viewed, it appears to be of great public value and benefit, and as such, we confidently recommend it to the authorities of the nation.— Japan Mail,

THE RETROCESSION OF BESSARABIA

The Times inserts the following letter from Hobart Pasha:—"In reference to the Russian demand for Bessarabia, I remark that Russia always insists that, however much she may ourtail her demands territorially speaking, her new territory must include the Kilia month of the Danube. Of course it must—that is, if she is to have anything of great value commercially and stragetically, for the following reseons. At the Killa or northernmost outlet, or, as it is called, branch, of the Danube, the sand banks are growing so fast to seaward that already a harbour fairly protected from all winds has been formed between the point of sand at the entrance of the branch and the main land, a distance of about two miles: in fact, during the late war I was anchored there with several ships in perfect safety. In a few years a capital harbour will be formed. Admiral Spratt, R.N., who has surveyed that coast, oan corroborate what I state. In addition to this there is another point of still greater importance connected with the Kilia branch of the Danube which should be generally known. It is this—that whoever commends. them by its being represented as a return to the all trade in that river; at all events, so far as the entrance and some 10 miles upward is concerned because, by deepening channel in that branch, h would invite (it must be remembered that the Kills branch is the first outlet the water in the great river finds in its downward course) the great rush of water into its channels. This rush would of course lessen the depth of water in the two other or lower branches, and this little game might be carried on so as to render Sulina and St. George's mouths mere mud pool. It may be all very well to talk of retribution for the manes of the Emperor Nicholas, but I strongly suspect that the great champions of the cause of humanity and religion think more of possessing a snug little port in the Black Sea, with the power of any day stopping the commerce of the Danuba or at all events commanding it, than of the dear departed. If Russia is to have the Kilia branch of the Danube, the waters, works, &c., must be in the hands of the European Commission of the and to the very mouth of the branch, and no means must be at hand which would admit of her suddenly taking possession. need but refer to the pages of Gibbon. Finlay, and the other authentic historians of the Roman or Byzantine East: At present a buky, indusrious, money loving, money making race, they are, and for centuries past have been, the most acquiescent, not to say the most abject servants, of whatever Government—Russian, Ottoman, or Persian—has claimed or ruled them. An ecclesinstical organisation, much broken and eleft by endless internal schisms, a vestry unison, made up of, rather than interrupted by, a continuous succession of vestry quarrels, a scanty and legendary literature, just kept up by monastic antiquarianism and cloistered study—such are the only evidences of a 'national individuality,' the elements of stability, the light that is to illumine surrounding nations, discerned by the gladdened ave of onthusinsts. They will hardly commend themselves for such to the more limited vision of practical observers. Were the Jewish indwellers of any European State, of Gormany, say, of France, of Russia, of England, to lay before Congress a claim to a separate province. autonomy, and so forth, would any one be equally ready to back their petition? And yet what title to these desirable things can the Armenians produce that the Jews cannot vindicate for them. selves twofold and more? The Armenians had a literature of their own a Church of their own. history of their own, and last, but by no means east, they had a national individuality which had never been absorbed, even amid the conflicts and ersecutions of centories.' Be it so. Now for Armenian 'substitute 'Jew' throughout; how reads the sentence? Is it weakened or emphasised by the substitution? And how about aptuess for autonomy' as illustrated by the past? True from Saul to Alroy the history of Jewish self-rule s but a chequered one, alas! but compared with the brief intervals of semi-independence, the discords, the treasons, the base servilities, the gnominious submissions of what the antiquary can obscurely trace as Armenian nationality, it is glory, it is success itself. Surely the craters of the Jerusalem Chamberhad more justly recommended the reconstitution of Judes than of Armenia; perhaps, more judiciously too. No doubt the Armenian natives of Asia Minor desire a better mode of government than that they have thus far experienced, especially of late years; so also do the Kurds, the Georgiaus, the Turkomans, the Lazes; and rightly all of them. But that better rovernment is not to be found in widened division, in formented discord, in caste antitheses, in sectarian fanaticisms, in baseless enthusiasms, in empirio faucies, but in organised union, in social fusion, in common administration, in equal brotherhood, in law, in justice, in coherent fact. And those are the true remedies for existent

many persons as well as to enthusiastic Greeks. if there were no difficulties in the way of the annexation of the island of Crete to Greece. Unfortunately practical politics do not usually adapt themselves for the gratification of enthusiasts. and sentimentalists, and as things are there is no prospect of any early fulfilment of this pleasant ay-dream. The difficulties in the way are not wholly due to the fact that the Turk is in possession, though, considering that the island is part of his dominion over which he continues to maintain his authority, that is an obstancle that s not to be easily overcome. Neither England nor all the Great Powers of Europe in union are entitled to resolve the Ottoman Empire into what may have been its component parts many hundreds of years ago. The Congress at Berlin will do what lies within the lines of what is practicable to satisfy Greek aspirations, without doing violent injustice to the claims and rights of other States. But there is no likelihood that it will adopt a programme for the further partition of Purkey by abstracting provinces that have never been able to assert their own independence. The difficulties in this case, however, are not wholly from the side of Turkey. It would seem that there is no evidence whatever that the Christian population in Grete is unanimous in desiring union with Greece. If, as seems to be the case, the majority look forward to the establishment of an autonomous Government, what guarantee for the maintenance of tranquillity could there be in forcibly aiding and abetting annexation to Greece? > CINDERS IN THE EYE, Persons travelling much by railway are subject to continual annoyance from the flying not only painful for the moment, but often the cause of long suffering that ends in a total loss of sight. A very simple and effective cure is within the reach of every one, and would prevent much suffering and expense were it more generally know. It is simply, one or two grains of flax seed. It is said they may be placed in the eye without injury or pain to that delicate organ, and shortly they begin to swell and dissolve a glutinous substance that covers the ball of the eye, enveloping any foreign substance that may be in it. The irritation or outting of the membrano is thus prevented, and the annoyance may soon be washed out. A dozen of these grains stowed away in the vest pocket may prove, in an emergency, worth their number in gold. The foregoing remedy, from the Mining and Scientific Press, appears to be based on the homeopathic principle, "Like cures like." Whether the sticking of flaxseeds into an inflamed eye is likely to prove beneficial is questionable. Better pull
